Wedding Etiquette

To aid you in the planning of your day and assist in its smooth running, we have compiled this list of useful things for you to bear in mind. These details are useful whether you have chosen a formal or informal arrangement; these points do help to keep things looking professional.

The Receiving Line

This offers the Bride and Groom the opportunity to meet and greet all of their guests, and for the guests to offer personal notes of congratulation. It also gives the parents of the Bride and Groom the ideal opportunity to meet the guests who are there to share your happy day.

The line would usually consist of:

The Grooms Mother

The Brides Father

The Bride

The Bride Groom

The Brides Mother

The Grooms Father

The line would normally be in this order, although changes are easily made.

Grace

If Grace is to be said it would normally fall upon the Vicar or a Family Friend to say it. The M.C. / Toastmaster is also available to say it if you have not chosen a particular person.

The Top Table

Who sits at the Top Table with the Bride and Groom is adaptable to your own requirements; the traditional way however is as follows:

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10

Key

- | | |
|------------------|----------------------|
| 1. The Best Man | 6. The Bride |
| 2. Bridesmaid | 7. The Brides Father |
| 3. Grooms Father | 8. The Grooms Mother |
| 4. Brides Mother | 9. Bridesmaid |
| 5. The Groom | 10. Chief Bridesmaid |

Speeches

To take away the worry of the speeches and their order, we have produced the following guide, this should give you a good indication of what should happen and who should make which announcements. Traditionally the Best Man or the M.C. announces the cutting of the cake once coffee has been served. On cutting the cake, the Groom should take the knife and place it near the centre of the bottom tier, his wife should then place her left hand over his, and together they push the knife into the heart of the cake. This completes the formal cutting of the cake and the staff will then remove it for portioning and distribution to your guests.

The speeches follow the cutting of the cake; these can be introduced individually by the M.C., or by the Best Man. The order of the speeches would normally be as follows:

The Brides Father

The Brides Father proposes a toast to the Bride and Groom, he makes his speech first, which would normally be of a semi-serious nature and possibly cover:

1. The happiness he and his wife have experienced bringing up their daughter.
2. A couple of interludes in her life.
3. A welcome into the family to their new son-in-law.
4. An episode concerning the Bride and Groom.
5. The toast to health, wealth and happiness of the couple.

The Bridegroom

It is customary for the Bridegroom to reply on behalf of his wife and himself, thanking the guests for their good wishes and gifts, their parents and all those who have helped to make their Wedding day a success, concluding with the Bridesmaids. The Bridegroom would at this point present any gifts that need to be given, and then propose a toast to the Bridesmaids. He may also like to refer to:

1. The thanks he owes to his parents and anything they may have provided for the couples future.
2. The thanks he owes to his wife's parents and anything they may have provided for the couples future, especially the birth of their daughter.
3. Perhaps a short interlude in his meeting with his wife.
4. A reference to the Bridesmaids and his thanks for their help during the day.

The Best Man

The Best Man responds on behalf of the Bridesmaids. The speech should be as light and humorous as possible. He may refer to:

1. The Grooms luck in meeting his Bride.
2. The difficulty in getting the Groom to the alter
3. A few well chosen stories on the Grooms character, but never referring to ex - girlfriends, politics or religion.
4. He may read some of the cards from well-wishers who could not attend.
5. And of course, the thanks of the Bridesmaids for the compliments of the Groom

The Best mans speech would usually conclude the formal proceedings of the day.

The Duties of the Toastmaster / M.C.

The Toastmaster / M.C. is usually the Manager on duty on the day of your Wedding, they are there to look after you and your guests and to perform special duties to make things easier for you.

The M.C. will meet and greet you and your guests at the entrance of the Willow Suite and direct you to the arrival area, where the arrival drinks will be served. They will help to organise the guests for photographs and arrange the receiving line. Their next task will be to introduce yourselves into the reception room to a standing ovation from your guests and helping you to your seats, at this point they will introduce whom ever is saying Grace or say Grace for you depending on the arrangements made. From here they will ensure things are kept running smoothly for you until it is time to cut the cake, at which time the Best Man or themselves will call on you to cut the cake, after which the cake will be removed. The speeches follow the cutting of the cake and the M.C. will introduce each speech in turn, according to the arrangements made.

During the evening the M.C. takes on a slightly different roll where they are there to help if you encounter any problems but leave you to enjoy the evening.
